We Catholics make pilgrimages to the holy places dedicated to the worship of God and the saints. We seek refreshment, a feeling of union with the ones we visit. We come away with memories that endure.

It is in a similar spirit that we visit the resting places of our own dead. Our prayers for them seem to reestablish the family circle in a limited way. Our dead become alive again, they seem to speak to us of yesterday, today and tomorrow.

Such visits to the sacred confines of the Conewago Chapel Cemetery will be made more fruitful through the efforts of the John Timon Reilly Historical Society to identify the resting places of the individual departed.

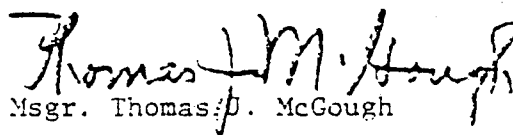

To do so is a tremendous task. The first burial in the cemetery was that of Dudley Digges in 1752. The oldest monument is that of Samuel Lilly, who came from England in search of religious freedom and died in 1758. The bodies of the Jesuits identified with this area, which had been buried under the church, have been exhumed and removed to the area dominated by the Mission Cross. Their empty tombs are still in the basement of the basilica.

But how to identify the resting places of the myriads who have been buried here? The burial records are the sketchiest in the parish files. The first attempt to make an orderly record of lots and owners was made in 1893 by Father Timothy O'Leary, S.J. Since then the problem has been complicated by transfers of lot ownership, unrecorded. The resultant puzzle will take demanding research for solution.

This work of Mr. Francis Miller and his helpers is invaluable. It can be used in tracing those elusive "roots" which in our day have entranced our amateur genealogists. It can be a comfort to those who may pay tribute to their dead by the loving care of their graves.

It is our hope that this work will be a foundation for further study not only of genealogy but of the history of our country.

"Then I heard a voice from heaven say to me, "Write down: Happy are those who die in the Lord! Indeed, the Spirit says: now they can rest forever after their work, since their good deeds go with them." Revelations, Chapter 14, Verse 13.

INTRODUCTION

With the enormous increase of interest in genealogy, by millions of people, the John Timon Reily Historical Society felt there was a pressing need to undertake the collecting, arranging and publishing of the old burial records of Conewago Chapel.

Like all the old records of Conewago Chapel, the burial records were in chronological order from about the year 1752. They were in latin, laboriously penned by hand, in the original torn and faded journals. What a wealth of material we would have if we could find the records of the previous years. A lot of these records were registered from notes taken as the Jesuits completed their rounds of the mission field.

An effort has been made to keep family listings together, regardless of alphabetical order, although the head of the family is listed in alphabetical order.

Through our alphabetical listing of these records, we have tried to ease the burden of anyone seeking knowledge of the past generations. By using the cemetery map and the grave listings, anyone can quickly locate any memorial stone still in our cemetery.

Since the ravages of time have taken an enormous toll of the old tombstones, we felt the publishing of this book was of the highest priority. John Timon Reily, in his Conewago Collections, lamented the fact he could not carry out the task of arranging the Conewago Registers. We know he would be pleased with the plans the John Timon Reily Historical Society has for publishing these records in usable form.

The records were entered in the old journals by the Jesuits, who were of various nationalities. This and the fact that the early parish members were of so many ethnic groups, and different levels of learning, probably contributed to the various ways of spelling names, even in the same family.

Due to the difference in spelling there is bound to be some duplication. There is no attempt to correct the spelling or change any incorrect dates. Since many of the death and burial records were collected by the Jesuits on their rounds of the missions, they are not all buried at Conewago.

All monuments and graves do not necessarily follow in a straight line, there will be some slight difference in the interpretation of the location of some of the graves. Large family plots are located in as many as 4 or 5 rows of graves, yet these plots are listed as being in one particular row.

In presenting this publication for the use of one and all, we gratefully acknowledge the support and cooperation of our own Bishop Daley, the enormous amount of help received from Msgr. McGough, particularly in the translation of the records from Latin, to Edw. T. Scholly, Director of Diocesan Cemeteries, to Alice Starner, Albert Dudrear, Jr., Col. Arthur Cunningham, Charles L. Weaver, Eleanor Weaver, Elna Smith, Joseph Hemler, Anna May Miller, Beth Carbaugh, Julie Carbaugh, Dave Brady and all the other people who contributed so generously of their time to the success of this undertaking. No small part of this success is due to Calvin E. Adams, for his help in arranging and printing.

There are many people buried here for whom there is no stone or marker. This is especially true of the older graves of the Jesuits, many of whom are buried under the present Church. Since this catalog is primarily a listing of all the information on the tombstones, it does not necessarily follow that all names listed are deceased.

Because of the probability of many errors turning up in these records, we ask that all such errors be reported to the John Timon Reily Historical Society. In the course of time, these corrections and other additions will be printed in a supplement to be made available later.

We present this publication to further the interest and pride in our Catholic heritage. May all of us find happiness and satisfaction in its use.

PAST MEMORIES OF THE CONEWAGO GRAVEYARD

Father Enders sold the first lots in the graveyard. In his earlier years he would say, "We make no charge but accept your offering." Neighbors and friends would dig the grave free of charge. No charge was made for burial till about 1850, after which, payment of $1.00 became the rule. The poor were buried free.

The red cedar trees growing in the cemetery were known as palm trees to the older generations of Conewago parishioners. We first learned of this from Mrs. Mary Reily Noel, who was John T. Reily's sister. There were no palm fronds to be had in this area for Palm Sunday, so the branches of the cedar trees were used in place of palm, and through this use the cedar trees became known as palm trees.

In colonial times, during the residency of Father De Barth, yellow fever was prevalent. Being a contagious disease, anyone thought to have contracted it were shunned. According to John T. Reily, there was a Baron de Beelen Berthoff died in York, supposedly from the fever. Being a catholic, he requested burial at Conewago because of his friendship with the Jesuits stationed there. The delivery of the body from York was made about noon by horse and wagon. The delivery man unloaded in front of the Church and left immediately for York. The body stayed in front of the Church till evening when Father De Barth was able to get help to bury it.

Many of the emigrants who left the Conewago area took a bit of the hallowed ground with them.

During the 1880 period, when William Ackerman was superintendent of the cemetery, it was enlarged and the stone wall was extended back to the public road. This wall which started at the rear of the Church, separated the vineyard from the cemetery. The vineyard was located along the access road leading from the public road to the Chapel and was a necessary part of the operation of the Chapel because all the altar wines were made here, not only for the Chapel, but for the surrounding missions.

Some of the other men who worked around the Church were Landelin Losman, George Ackerman, Tom McClain, Jacob Little, the old carpet weaver, Adam Oaster and Henry Kaehler.

Some of the old tombstone cutters names that survive are Hombach, Felty, Lough and Barth, who for a short time had his shop in one of the little stone schoolhouses that stood in front of the Church.

CONEWAGO CEMETERY MAP (NO SCALE)

When using the location map of the cemetery, please note that the main sections are separated by paved roads and are designated as follows: A, B, B1, C, D, and E. The row numbers begin closest to the Church and continue numerically to the end of the cemetery farthest from the Church. The grave numbers in each row start at the paved road and continue either right or left until the end of the row in that section. In the location symbol, the section letter will be listed first, followed by the row number, then the grave number.

Deaths and Burials

Addendum

After a research of the Sacramental Death Records of Conewago Chapel, by Msgr. McGough, we have come up with the following records which should be added to the original Deaths and Burials Catalog, as published by the John Timon Reilly Historical Society.

A few burials were missed in the original and some corrections were added to this addendum, while many of the early burials had no stones. Also many of the early stones have disintegrated from the ravages of time and weather.

By adding all these sources of missing records we hope we have achieved our goal to publish the Conewago Chapel Sacramental and Burial Records in their entirety, as far as humanly possible.

Many of these records carry no location symbols, but do carry other information such as the place of residence. Therefore the format is just a trifle changed from the original Death and Burials publication to accommodate the extra information.

PREFACE

THE CONEWAGO DEAD

Being a list of those buried in the Conewago Chapel Cemetery known to have served their country in the several wars in which this nation engaged. The list is probably not complete and many of these honored dead lie in unmarked graves.

Information for this list was gathered from the following sources:

The Conewago Chapel Records of Monsignor Thomas J. McGough, Pastor of the Chapel.

The MacPherson Collection of Miss B. M. F. MacPherson, Gettysburg, PA.

John T. Reilly, Collections and Recollections in the Life and Times of Cardinal Gibbons.

The Genealogical Collection of Albert C. Dudrear, York, PA.

The Genealogical Collection of Col. Arthur S. Cunningham, USAF (Ret.), New Oxford, PA.

May the Star Spangled Banner always wave over this hallowed ground, and may the sacrifices, the deeds and the glory of these patriots never be forgotten, their image tarnished, nor their ideals compromised. May the freedom they won and maintained always be a part of our heritage. May the legacy we pass on be as proud and full of glory as that which we received from these honored dead.
